Minnesota Association of Christian Schools

In our last MACS newsletter article, we considered the definition of social justice and how social justice thought is infiltrating our public school curricula. Many of our area districts are designing their curriculum to align with the major concepts or elements of social justice. We defined social justice as “a political and philosophical concept which holds that all people should have equal access to wealth, health, well-being, justice, and opportunity” (Investopedia).

While we must acknowledge the shortcomings and injustices in our history and move to correct those injustices, the social justice movement is a radical response to make drastic changes to the detriment of our culture. The movement to make these changes has been happening for some time. According to an article written by Bree Picower, we learned about the first element of the social justice curriculum in our last newsletter, “Self-love and Knowledge” (see volume XXVI, Issue 1). “Respect for Others,” “Issues of Social Injustice,” “Social Movements and Social Change,” “Awareness Raising” and “Social Action” round out the elements identified in Picower’s article (Picower, pp. 4-5).

Included in the topics of “Respect for Others” and “Issues of Social Injustice,” teachers, as models and examples for their students, provide their own stories regarding their cultural identities with their students. Students study different aspects of their identities and associated histories. Negative stereotypes about student identities are deconstructed. Students learn about the history of racism, sexism, classism, homophobia, religious intolerance, and how these things have oppressed and negatively affected cultures and our society today.

While on the surface, some of the topics described above are accurate, some are not.

Rather than include God and the truth of His Word, absolute truth is completely denied and ignored. We are placing blame on a system of government that is the envy of the world, pointing the finger at institutions, political parties, and other entities. Instead of recognizing that the ills of our society are caused by man’s sin and his sinful choices, we simply will not take personal responsibility and admit our sin and make the necessary corrections. Of course, to make this correction means to acknowledge a need for a Savior. We are quick to play the blame game instead of taking responsibility for our actions and we are seeing the following results in culture today: a diminishing of authority, a disregard for our country and freedoms, a misunderstanding of nationalism, the creation of a victim mentality, more dissension among races, a divisiveness with regard to the roles of the man and woman, an entitlement mentality, inability to cope with and solve problems, a general lack of wisdom, and an unhealthy fear of saying anything or standing up for right without being chastised publicly. We are quickly moving to a censored society that will abandon its history, government, and that will continue to experience an erosion of freedoms all in the name of social justice. This is not the training we want for our children, nor is it the way we want our children to think. We must come to grips with the fact that what is being presented today, more so than ever before, is completely contrary to what the Bible teaches.

In our Christian schools, we teach that God created all people, regardless of skin color or culture, and that every person is equal in the sight of God. Furthermore, God’s plan of salvation is available to every person regardless of age, race, or culture. We are to prefer one another and seek to obey the mandate to “love your neighbor as yourself" (Gal. 5:14b). God is no respecter of persons. But we do teach that man has a moral responsibility before God to obey His mandates. We do not believe that the concept of diversity should include gay marriage or changing one's gender. God created each person as they are – He made no mistakes. God not only knit me together in my mother's womb (Psalm 139:13), but His plan for my life includes responsibilities related to my gender. I am a man, husband, father, and ministry leader. If I am in God's will, these are the very things He created me to be and do. Not only do I not have the right to question God's choice of gender and role for my life, I certainly do not have a right to reject it. To do so would be the ultimate slap in God's face. By rejecting my gender, I would be saying, "God, you made a mistake with me!" In addition, if I reject God's design for marriage, I am in direct disobedience to God's Word regarding the sanctity of the marriage relationship (Gen. 2:18-25; Eph. 5:22-33). What I find interesting, is that the Bible clearly teaches a respect for others and a mandate to love others; yet those on the social justice side of things are so quick to criticize the religious right as a source of hate. Let it be known that we do not hate individuals whose lifestyles are contrary to the Word of God. We affirm the standard of God's Word which identifies right from wrong, and we will continue to hold to that standard in our churches and Christian schools. We will not shroud our agenda behind societal ills, past or present.

As a result of the integration of social justice into secular curriculum, many parents continue to flee a system that is clearly without any moral compass. The lines are so clearly being drawn that the Christian family is faced with a dilemma and a choice to make: will we continue to allow our children to be taught a worldview that is contrary to our family's belief?

Christian schools began out of conviction in the late 60's and early 70's when prayer and Bible were removed from public education. Schools were started by the thousands because people believed that without the fear of the Lord, there was no wisdom, and without knowledge of the Holy One, there was no understanding (Proverbs 9:10). Our school still holds firmly to this belief and we still base all that we do on the truth of the Word of God.

What happens to a society that once held dear the beliefs of God's Word and included those truths as the foundation of all learning, but has now totally removed them from their educational system? Before our very eyes, we see our culture crumbling. There is a generational divide and decline... a divide and decline in morality, and a definite decline in church attendance nationally. The battle for the moral heart and soul of America is on. How will the Christian respond?

I do know how I will respond. I will respond by working tirelessly for the cause of Christian education. We must continue to build and make our Christian schools strong and continue to improve our programs so that we can have the best schools possible. I call on our families to pray and support our mission and purpose. I call on our families to daily pray for each of your child's teachers. I call on our families to be faithful in your walk with the Lord and in the raising of your children. Dads, please make sure that you are taking your children to church and they are seeing a man who loves

God, his wife, and who leads his family. The role of the husband and wife is so distorted in our culture today that if we, as men, don't show the proper, biblical role, I am afraid our sons and daughters will never learn what God's purpose is for their life. Continue to share the news of our Christian schools with others who might want to consider it for their children. And ... pray for our country, our leaders, and particularly our pastors. Our pastors need a hedge of protection around them and their families. We pray that our pastors will be outspoken, bold, and convicting in their teaching, preaching, and leadership. We must all be bold to influence those around us for the cause of Christ.

The chief focus of our influence must be the next generation whom God has entrusted to us. Parents, we must diligently work together to this end. Three entities must be working together: the Home—God's #1 providentially-placed, priority learning institution; the Church—the place of spiritual impact of the training of parents; the School—#3 on the list, as the institution whose proper position is to be an extension and support for the church and the home. If all three are in place, stable, and working in harmony with one another, complementing one another, we will see success in the education of our children. Satan will not be able to thwart it. The public school cannot replace it. Social justice can't defeat it.

We must be faithful to our God, consistent in our walk with Christ, and steadfast in the work of the Lord. We must remain immovable when it comes to our convictions regarding Christian education.

A solid educational system, based on absolute truth, will impact the next generation for Christ. ~ Mr. Alan J. Hodak

JH MACS FINE ARTS FESTIVAL

The eighth annual Junior High Fine Arts Festival was held on Friday, March 8 at First Baptist School in Rosemount. We had 11 schools participate in 223 different events. There were 227 middle school students involved in music, chess, Bible, art, and speech. The largest involvement by category was the vocal solo with 21 entries.

The Junior High MACS Fine Arts Festival is a great opportunity for these young people. It develops their talents and abilities for the Lord, and it helps them to focus and work on something they can “see through” to the finish. We added the Chess category this year and had 15 participants. The young people enjoyed the time, and I can assure you, it was the quietest room in a building full of junior-highers!

We would like to encourage as many young people as possible to participate in next year’s festival. It is scheduled for Friday, March 6, 2020 with a 9 a.m. opening assembly in the auditorium at First Baptist School of Rosemount. See you there! - Dr. Charlie Graves

SH MACS FINE ARTS FESTIVAL

The SH MACS Fine Arts Festival was hosted by Fourth Baptist Christian School on April 5, 2019. Ten MACS schools participated this year in various music, art, and academic events. There were 300 students total. We had a very full schedule of music performances that kept our students busy participating and watching throughout the day.

We are grateful for our judges that gave of their time and expertise to not only judge the event, but to provide insights and constructive criticism to the performers. Students learned much from the judges and their helpful comments.

Matthew Nyquist of Fourth Baptist was chosen to perform his vocal solo during the awards ceremony, as well as the Men's Trio from Rosemount and the Men's Ensemble from Woodcrest. (All three were first place performances.)

We are very thankful for the abilities that the Lord has given to our students and are pleased with the results of the day. It's great to see students improving in their abilities from year to year. These events give our students excellent practice in performing that will help them in future ministry opportunities.
